*Túculo, or Túrolo, was in antient times a certain band, vail or ſcarf of purple-ſilk, which the wives of the Flamins or High-Prieſts were wont to wear plaited about their hairs, that they might be known from other women; the Flamins and High-Prieſts alſo were wont to wear them in their ſolemne Sacrifices, and therefore were they called Tutuláti. Várro, ſayth, that Túruli, were the hairs or treſſes which the Matrons or Mothers of many children uſed to wear on the top or crowns of their heads; Some affirm that Túrulo is derived of Túrulo; And ſouldiers were antiently called Turuli, becauſe they were to defend their Countrey. Varro ſayth moreover, that Tutáno, (a moſt noble God) was earneſtly invoked and called upon by ſuch as were in any miſery or affliction.

*Tutulína, Turolína, was the name of a Goddeſſe much cal'ed upon by all miſerable wretches, and poor afflicted perſons, and from thence was the name Tirus derived, ſome will have Tutulína, and Turelína, to be all one.
